The developed process tested with dye wastewater prepared at laboratory scale and applied at dye waste collected from dye center showed equal validation to both systems. The recovery of water was 95%. This method can comprehend complete color removal of the dye wastewater leading to mineralization couple with change in oxidation state of Mn from + 7 to +2. The method can also improve BOD5/COD ratio from lower than 0.01 to higher than 0.1, which means that this method can be used not only for high-efficient decolorization of dye wastewater, but also as a preliminary step of utilization of dye wastewater after its recycling. The new developed method proves very cost effective and eco-friendly.
