143612

The invention relates to novel a compound of general formula (I) wherein i and i', Y, G, L, R1, R2, n and s are as defined therein; which are acting both as muscarinic receptor antagonist and beta2 adrenergic receptor agonist, and to composition comprising them for the treatment of the diseases of the respiratory tract.

698/2016 LONATI S.P.S, Italy.—"A double cylinder circular mchine and a method for preparing a tubular article on the double cylinder circular machine".

D04B 9/40 & D04B 9/10.

A method for preparing a tubular article, such as a sock or the like, for automated pickup at the end of its forming on a double cylinder circular machine with at least one feed or drop, and to a double cylinder circular machine for the executiion thereof. The method in question is executed on a machine with at least one feed or drop (100) and with the needle cylinders (4, 5) actuatable with a rotary motion about their own axes (3) with respect to needle actuation cams, to cams (34) for actuating the knockover sinkers (33) and to the feed or drop (100). The method comprises :

- a first step, which consists in transferring or retaining all the needles (8) in the lower needle cylinder (4) with the loops of the last row of knitting of the article (80), formed previously in the upper head (9a) of the needles (8), hooked, tensioning the article (80) downward inside the lower needle cylinder (4);
- a second step, which consists in pushing upward the portion of the article (80) engaged with the needles (8);
- a third step, which consists in moving all the needles (8) to the tuck stitch positions;
- a fourth step, which consists in progressively disengaging the knockover sinkers (33) from the article (80), moving the knockover sinkers (33) away from the axis (3) of the lower needle cylinder (4) at the feed or drop (100) owing to the rotation of the lower needle cylinder (4) about its own axis (3) with respect to the feed or drop (100) and to the needle actuation cams so that the article (80), owing to the upward thrust, moves so that the loops of its last row of knitting (80a) lie above the beak (33b) of the knockover sinkers (33) toward the upper head (9a) of the needles (8);
- a fifth step, which consists in moving all the needles (8) to an intermediate position that is comprised between the tuck stitch position and the drop stitch position;
- a sixth step, which consists in pushing the portion of the article (80) that is engaged with the needles (8) further upward;
- a seventh step, which consists in lifting the needles (8) at least to the drop stitch position, keeping the article (80) pushed upward in order to retain the loops of the last row of knitting (80a) in the upper head (9a) of the needles (8).

“Development of metallic mordant free and sustainable natural dyine process for textile”.

143614

This novel method is related to dyeing with natural dyes by using formaldehyde free cross- linker ideally bio-based cross-linkers with or without catalyst in one bath dyeing. The natural dye can be of any dye source obtained from natue. While the bio based cross-linker can be citric acid, aconitic acid and succinic acid. The catalyst can be any phosphite or phosphate preferably sodium hypo phosphite. The dyeing temperature can be from 15°C to 140°C. The one bath application of the natural dye along with biocross-linker and/catalyst imparted the improvement in shade depth, fastness properties along with the additional advantage of better shrinkage control, superior easy care performance and good antimicrobial performance.

The invention is directed to an integrated process and system for exhaust dyeing and finishing through nano bubble technology. The process of micro-nano bubble dyeing and finishing process is typically optimized to liquor to goods ratio of 1:0.5, 1:1 or 1:5. In this process even and uniform dyeing and finishing is achieved on fabric/garment by adding the pre-wetting step before dyeing and or finishing through micro-nano bubble technology. Improvement in the shade depth, other performance parameters, fastness and especially uniformity have been achieved by this new innovation

143616 732/2018 MIKASA Corporation, Japan.—“A method for manufacturing a Sports Ball.”

The present invention describe the natural oils and process to develop insect repellent fabric that can be used to repel the deadly mosquitoes and vectors that cause dengue, malaria and a number of diseases. The invention is related to the applications of natural oils and formaldehyde free carboxylic acid based cross-linker especially bio based like citric acid, aconitic acid and succinic acid with and without catalyst onto the fabric through simple dipping method like in a tub or washing machine. The invention includes the making of insect and mosquito repellent article during the rinsing cycle by using a washing machine. In the exemplary embodiment, this invention includes the application of natural oils such as neem oil, peppermint oil, eucalyptus oil, clove oil, lemongrass oil, castor oil and its mixture. The combination of natural oil and citric acid along with catalyst also incorporate the additional benefits on the treated textile like easy care performance, shrinkage control and anti-microbial properties.

There is provided a method for manufacturing a sportsball which is a stick ball such as soft leather ball having a decrease in impact force as compared with conventional thread wound balls. The method for manufacturing a sportsball comprising a of spherical hollow rubber bladder filled with compressed air and a thread wound reinforced layer formed by evenly winding filament threads around the surface of the rubber bladder, characterized in that the nylon filament threads each formed by highly twisting two filament yarns each of 30–50 deniers with a single twist, are used as winding threads.
