A saddle riding type vehicle includes a brake pedal (44), an equalizer (43), a rear fender (37), and a blocking wall (65). The brake pedal (44) is attached to a pivot frame (19). The equalizer (43) is connected to a front wheel brake (29) by a brake cable (39), and distributes a braking operation force to the front wheel brake (29) and a rear wheel brake (35) in operative connection with operation of the brake pedal (44). The rear fender (37) extends in a circumferential direction of a rear wheel (WR) while curving along the shape of the rear wheel (WR), and has a curved portion (37a) whose recess surface is faced to the rear wheel (WR). The blocking wall (65) is continuous from the curved portion (37a), and extends between the rear wheel (WR) and the brake cable (39). The rear fender (37) has an opening (68) disposed at a position on the outside in a vehicle width direction of the blocking wall (65), the brake cable (39) being inserted through the opening (68).
