METHOD OF THE TREATMENT OF WASTE-WATER FOR IRRIGATION OF CROPS”.

C02F3/00

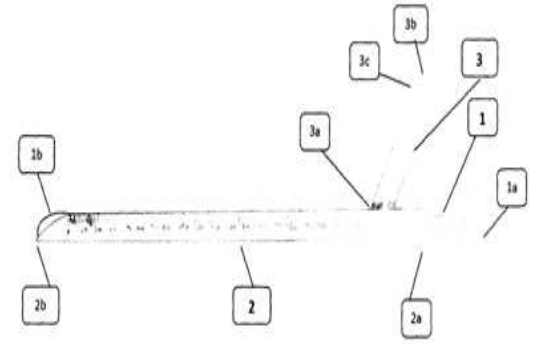

143638

An innovative method which discloses the sharing of burden on freshwater resources through elimination of heavy metals from the contaminated water comprises of surface science technology (SST), is delivered herein. The process disclosed the use of the Potato Peel Charcoal/ particles for the sorption of heavy metal (Cu, Pb, Fe and Ni) provided as a cost- effective technique thereof. A characteristic of the present SST is the management of a natural available solid waste materials couple with industrial waste materials. The invention discloses the approximately complete removal of heavy metals from the contaminated water thereof. Technology is made up of tank consisting of bricks, sand, and stone in which Potato peel charcoal/ particles from peels were placed and agitated with industrial wastewater where recovered water analyzed using atomic absorption spectrophotometry and tested in irrigation purpose of the seed germination. The invention covers the subsequent parts; collection of potato peels waste and conversion

- into bio sorbent surface/particles, sorption of metal from the contaminated water onto particles, analysis of the treated water, use of clean water for the germination of plants, analyses of storage materials in seeds includes lipids, protein, and carbohydrates in all traits and, germination of seeds recovered from treated plants. The invention unveils the method of procurement, healthy seeds for next-generation crops followed by enhanced agribis without producing burden on fresh water resources.
- 120/2018 GRANGER MAURICE, Portugal.—“OSCILLATORY MECHANISM WITH SIMULTANEOUS CROSSED-CENTRIFUGATIONS, MACHINE AND IMPLEMENTATION METHOD”.
- F03G3/06 & B06B1/16.
- 143639
- The object of the present invention is a mechanism (1), comprising: a base (2); a pendulum (6) mounted pivotally in relation to the base (2) about a pendulum axis (A0); a first eccentric element (10) generating a first moment (M1) of gravitational force (P1) about a first axis (A1); a second eccentric element (20) generating a second moment (M2) of gravitational force (P2) about a second axis (A2); and a synchronization system (8) of the first eccentric element (10) and the second eccentric element (20) according to a synchronized counter-rotating rotational movement (R1; R2); wherein: the pendulum axis (A0) and the axes (A1; A2) of the eccentric elements (10; 20) are parallel and arranged in the same plane (P0) integral to the pendulum (6); the axes (A1; A2) of the eccentric elements (10; 20) are supported by the pendulum (6), respectively above and below the pendulum axis (A0); and when the mechanism (1) is in operation: the eccentric elements (10; 20) are movable in synchronized counter-rotating rotation (R1; R2), with cross-centrifugations, the pendulum (6) pivots alternately (B1; B2) on one side then the other, amplifying the rotational movement (R1; R2) of the eccentric elements (10; 20), by means of simultaneous cross-thrusts of the pendulum (6) against the axes (A1; A2) of said eccentric elements (10; 20), and by the transmission of torque to the synchronization system (8), and the energy generated by centrifugation within the mechanism (1) is recoverable by coupling an energy recovery system (80) to the synchronization system (8).
- 121/2018 M/S Aviation Engineering Solution (AES) Private Limited, Pakistan.—“AIR CONDITIONING SYSTEM FOR SUPER MUSHSHAK AIRCRAFT FITTED WITH GLASS COCKPIT”.
- B64D13/00.
- 143640
- A Closed loop vapor cycle air conditioning system for Super Mushshak aircraft fitted with Glass cockpit is typical to the one used in households and automobiles. It has a compressor which compresses the refrigerant; the compression process increases the pressure and correspondingly increases the temperature as well. The refrigerant then passes through a condenser where Ram air is blown over it which removes the latent heat from the refrigerant and essentially converts it to liquid at high temperature and pressure. This liquid then passes through a Drier Bottle which has silica gel which removes any moisture from the refrigerant, the drier bottle has an electrical switch which is connected with the compressor; this switch shuts down the compressor when the refrigerant pressure increases above 450psi or decreases below 100psi. This liquid refrigerant then goes through front and rear expansion valves fitted in front and rear evaporators respectively; the sudden expansion converts the liquid refrigerant to gas; this expansion process significantly reduces the temperature of the refrigerant, when air is blown through the evaporator by a blower the air is cooler and is then vented out through front louvers in front and rear, this process cools the intended area. The cooler gas then reaches the compressor where the process is repeated.

- A01D45/10 & A01D49/00.

143641

The present invention is a machine used to scoop bud chips from setts of sugarcane. Bud chips of sugarcane contain buds and some portion of root primordial of internodes of setts. Sugarcane bud chip scooping machine consists of a rectangular frame, a power source (petrol engine), a large pulley, a pair of small pulleys and scooping unit (with six cutters). Power source creates circular rotation in large pulley with the help of belt, further this pulley is attached with a pair of small pulleys through belts. Bud chip scooping cutters are attached to the rod by cams, circular rotation in two rods through small pulleys enable the scooping cutters to move upward and downward. Sugarcane buds are scooped by placing sugarcane long stalk manually at right angle to the upward and downward moving scooping cutters. Scooped buds are cut from the stalk and thrown downward automatically in buckets.
