678/2011 GASFRAC ENERGY SERVICES INC., Canada.—“PRESSURE BALANCING PROPPANT ADDITION METHOD”.

E21B43/267.

143340

A method for controlling the flow of proppant into frac fluid during a frac. A first pressure source pressurizes fluid within a proppant addition unit. Process piping receives proppant through a proppant supply passage for supply to a frac pressure pump. A second pressure source pressurizes fluid within the process piping. A first sensor senses pressure on a first side of the proppant supply passage and outputs a first signal. A second sensor senses pressure on the process piping on a second side of the proppant supply passage and outputs a second signal. A processor receives the first signal and the second signal, and outputs a control signal to at least one of the first pressure source and the second pressure source in response to the first signal and the second signal to control proppant flow into the process piping.

A01N25/00.

143341

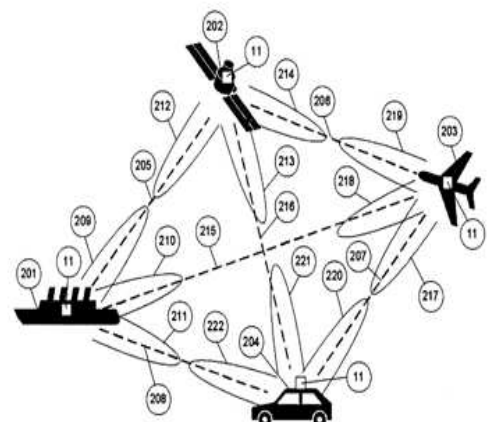

The present invention provides an excellent method of cultivating rice. A method of cultivating rice comprising a step of applying an effective amount of clothianidin to rice seeds that have been held in a wet state after an immersion treatment into water, and a step of sowing the rice seeds to a paddy field in a submerged or humid soil state after the application step shows an excellent effect on cultivation.

306/2012 Radionor Communications AS, Norway.—“Method and system for long-range adaptive mobile beam-forming ad-hoc communication system with integrated positioning”.

G01S5/02, H04W 84/18 & H04W64/00.

143342

Method and system for provided a long range, high capacity ad-hoc mobile communication network where a narrow antenna beam formed by a plurality of antenna elements, radio transceivers and digital spatial signal processing is used to provide a high accuracy positioning system integrated into the communication system. The relative positions and directive orientation of all the units in the network is done by mutual exchange of positioning data as an element in the communication protocol in the network. The integrated communication and positioning system is used to optimize range and communication quality, reduce interference in the network and comply with regulations according to the geographical position and direction of transmission. The low latency, high accuracy distributed positioning system is in one embodiment an efficient real-time guidance system for moveable object such as un-manned aircrafts where the reference system on the ground can consist of one or more moving units.
