A circular machine for knitting, hosiery or the like, with sinker actuation device, comprising a needle cylinder (2), arranged so that its axis (2a) is substantially vertical and actuatable with a rotary motion about the axis (2a) in both directions of rotation. The needle cylinder (2) has, on its lateral surface, a plurality of axial grooves (3), each of which accommodates a needle (4) that can move on command along the corresponding axial groove (3) in order to pick up at least one yarn dispensed at least one feed or drop (5) and form knitting. The machine also comprises needle actuation cams (10), which face the lateral surface of the needle cylinder (2) and define paths that are extended around the axis (2a) of the needle cylinder (2) and can be engaged by at least one heel (4a) of the needles (4), which protrudes from the lateral surface of the needle cylinder (2), in order to actuate the movement of the needles (4) along the corresponding axial groove (3) with respect to the needle cylinder (2) as a consequence of the rotation of the needle cylinder (2) about its own axis (2a) with respect to the needle actuation cams (10) and the at least one feed (5). The machine also comprises a sinker ring (6), which is integral with the needle cylinder (2) in rotation about its own axis (2a) and is arranged coaxially to the needle cylinder (2) at its upper end. The sinker ring (6) supports a plurality of sinkers (8) that can move radially with respect to the needle cylinder (2) and to the sinker ring (6). The machine also comprises a sinker cap (9), which is arranged above and coaxially with respect to the sinker ring (6) and supports sinker actuation cams (10) that define at least one path that is extended around the axis (2a) of the needle cylinder (2) and can be engaged by a heel (8a) of the sinkers (8), which protrudes upwardly from the sinker ring (6), in order to actuate the movement of the sinkers (8) along a radial direction with respect to the needle cylinder (2) and to the sinker ring (6) as a consequence of the rotation of the needle cylinder (2) about its own axis (2a) with respect to the sinker cap (9), to the at least one feed (5) and to the sinker actuation cams (10). The needle actuation cams (41) comprising two needle lifting cams (45, 46), respectively a first cam for lifting the needles to the tuck or dropped position (45) and a second cam for lifting the needles to the tuck or dropped position (46), which are arranged on mutually opposite sides with respect to an imaginary plane that passes through the axis (2a) of the needle cylinder (2) and through the at least one feed or drop (5) of the machine.

G01F1/30 & G01F1/00.

A digital flow velocity measurement apparatus includes a rectangular impact surface mounted [3b] on a thrust measuring sensor [3c] that takes the impact of flowing water and converts into an electric signal beam. The sensor is placed, by holding the apparatus from grip [4], at a desired depth alongside the impact surface by using graduated dipping rod [2] that can be extended [2b, 2c] or retracted [2a] keeping in view the desired working depth. The signal is carried across the dipping rod, by an electrical wire, to the top housing [1] where an amplifier is provided to boost the signal which gets weakened due to the increased distance between the sensor and top housing at the greater depths. The amplified electrical signal is ultimately directed toward the Arduino in the top housing. The Arduino processes the signal and converts it into velocity. A resistive OLED screen [5], controlled by Arduino, at the top of the device displays the velocity in desired units and also provides options to map average and instantaneous velocity profiles. The entire system is turned ON/OFF by using button [7] and powered by a dry battery that can be recharged by plugging in a portable charger from slot [8].
